Accelerator Independent Data Access

This page is for discussion and notes on the Accelerator Independent Data Access (AIDA) system. AIDA is a middleware software system which allows high level applications in Java to access data sources on distributed computers, control systems and databases.

See also:

- The AIDA Home page
- There is also another AIDA at SLAC, which is an effort to standardize on a data format for physics analysis data formats.
- The AIDA Jira Issue tracking page