protecting output files

We discovered early on with RM that one needs to protect its output from the unwary. Those with group write privilege to the disk could modify builds. Alex then write-protected the output (presumably turned off the group write bit). We should do something similar to protect the files the pipeline creates.